Jeff Hill is currently the Agriculture Program Manager for the Lancaster County Conservation District, where he has worked since 2005. Jeff oversees a department of 17 staff that work directly with the farming community in all aspects of conservation within the county. Before becoming the Program Manager, Jeff was an Agriculture Technician who worked with Act 38 Nutrient Management Plans (reviews). He also wrote Conservation Plans and implemented numerous Best Management Practices around the county. Jeff's previous work experience also includes more hands-on work within agriculture community as he was a cattle buyer, assistant to the director of cattle procurement and finally live animal handling supervisor for the Moyer Packing Company, located in Souderton PA. Jeff has served on the panel that conducted the Resource Improvement review for the Chesapeake Bay Program, served on Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management /Manure Management Delegation work group and has been an At-Large member of the Chesapeake Bay's Ag Workgroup for the past 2 years. Jeff received a Bachelor of Science (Animal Production/Business Management) from Penn State University in 2002. He is currently certified in Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Program, and also through the NRCS as a certified Conservation Planner.
