

> Historical loss of eelgrass (Zostera marina)

Lefcheck et al. 2017
Global Change Biology

> 29% decline since 1991

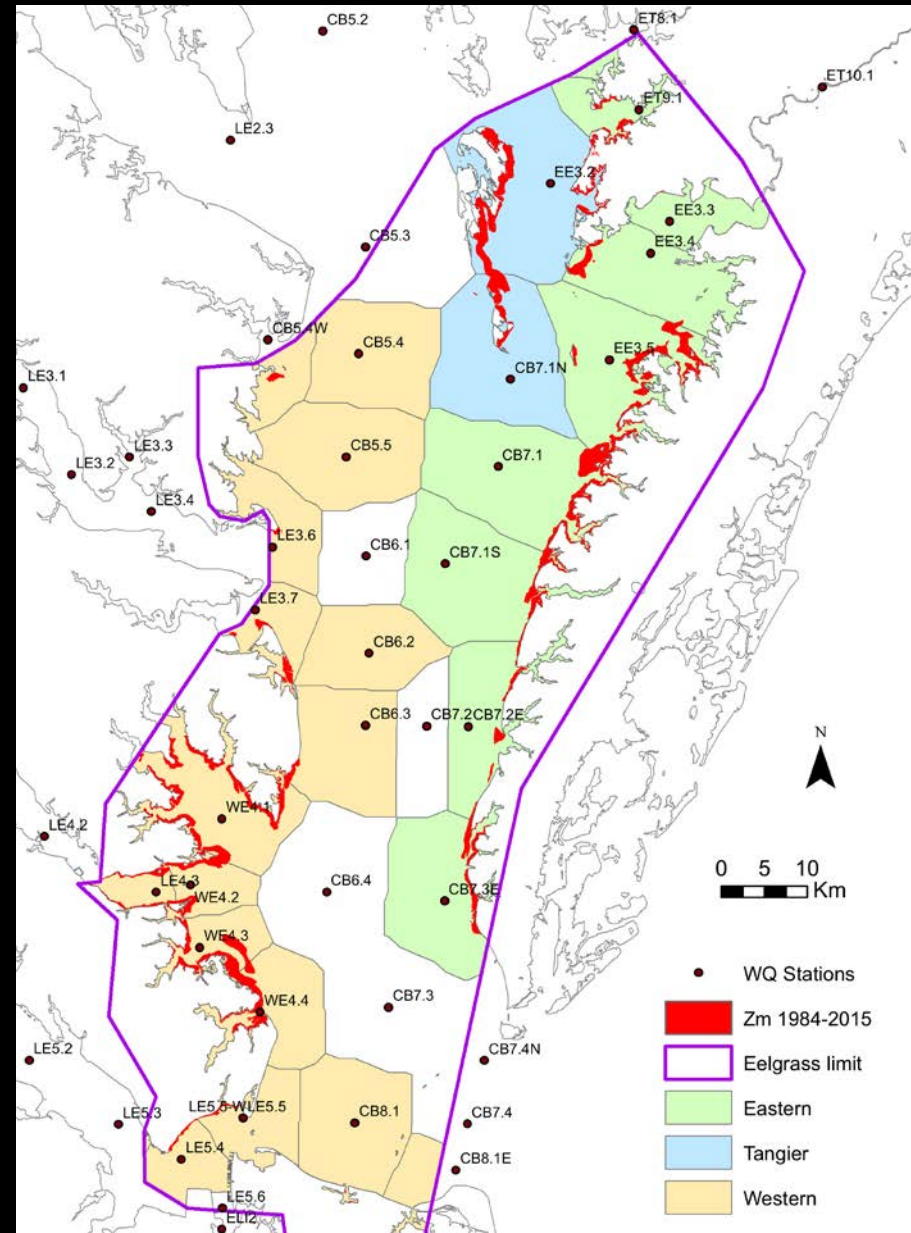

> 29% decline since 1991

> Loss of beds deeper than 0.5 m

> CBP Water Quality Monitoring (1984)

> Driven by warming and turbidity

> Driven by warming and turbidity

> Driven by warming and turbidity

> Interactive effects

> Scaling up to the whole Chesapeake

> Cascading effects of human impacts

> Cascading effects of human impacts

> Biodiversity is important

% Agro

Fertilizer

Nutrients

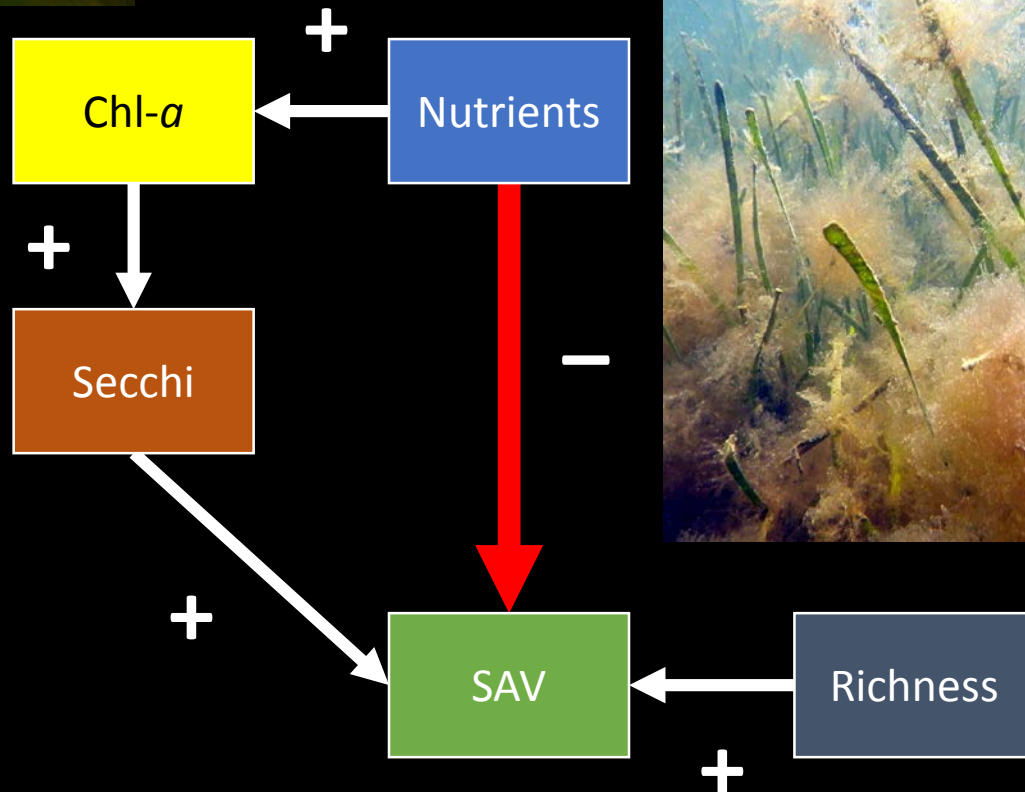

SAV

Richness

> Nutrient pathways

> Conclusions

- Eelgrass has declined by 30% since 1984
 - A combination of warming and turbidity
- SAV has more than doubled in Chesapeake Bay since 1984
 - Primarily controlled by nutrients
 - Nutrients a function of human activities
 - Affect SAV directly & indirectly by reducing water clarity